Street Plan Still Coming

Planning for Lincoln's community development has been around for some time.

Officials decided years ago it was better to plan than to let things develop in a hodgepodge way; and, in 1973, they decided that existing plans for development - of which transportation is a part - were out of date.

It was time to draw up a new blueprint, also known as the Comprehensive Plan, officials decided, and they set to work.

Things hummed along smoothly until one day hordes of people poured into the City Council

LONDON (AP) - The worst drought in many years has shriveled parts of Britain and Western Europe, killing food crops and forcing farmers to slaughter livestock that their parched meadows cannot feed.

The cost in most drought-stricken areas will not be known until harvest time, and experts say timely rain could still change the picture. But farmers and agriculture officials expressed concern.

In Britain the last 14 months have been the driest since record-keeping began 240 years ago, the meteorology department said. England's granary, the southeast, has had less than five inches of rain this year, compared to six inches in January 1975

Light snows and scanty rain in the Alps have brought Italy's Po River near its 1803 record low with a flow less than 25 per cent of normal.

West Germany's central weather headquarters reported only 23 per cent of normal rainfall for June. Czechoslovakia reported only 35 to 50 per cent of normal rain.

"There's growing concern, certainly," a spokesman for Britain's national farmers union said. "But it's really too early to tell what the damage is until you start combining and weighing.

Britain's reservoirs, normally brimming at this time of year, show broad borders of dry, cracked mud. In some areas local authorities have asked people not to water their lawns or wash their cars. The dry weather has been good for British hay, but also good for aphids, bugs which are sucking the life out of cereal grains in the south and southwest. Some farmers have already started feeding next winter's hay to cattle whose pastures have turned brown.

Winter-planted crops seem to be surviving well, the farmer's union spokesman said, but springplanted fields are hard hit. As for fruits, "It's going to be a very short season for strawberries could well be over this weekend." he said.

The situation in France is even worse, and officials there describe the drought as one of the century's worst. President Valery Giscard d'Estaing called it "a national calamity" and ordered special help for stricken farmers.

Roman Catholic priests in Paris prayed for rain as the city passed its third consecutive night of record heat Tuesday, with a low temperature of 74.1 degrees. Sheikh Abdelhamid Ameur, Moslem grand mufti of France, announced an open-air meeting Sunday to beg Allah for rain.

Agriculture ministry officials said they feared the grain harvest, an important factor in France's export income, would be 25 per cent below

Meat prices have dropped 11 per cent in two weeks as French farmers flooded the market with extra cattle. But the ministry warned consumers of steep increases to come if meat becomes scarce.

The French electric power monopoly cut power to homes from 220 volts to 200 because of a lack of water at hydroelectric power stations.

In northern Italy, millions of cattle faced premature slaughter for lack of feed.

"If we can't maintain the current quantity of water for irrigation for at least a few days, we run the risk of losing the entire corn crop," said Lombardy's agriculture assessor, Ernesto Vercesi. He called for imports of U.S. grain to head off the

Swiss agriculture officials said emergency slaughtering that began this week would add 40,000 head to the average of 120,000 cattle slaughtered annually. They expected grain and potato crops to be 50 to 80 per cent below average in the hardest-

In West Germany, where farmers complained of withered grains in their rye, wheat and barley fields, the agriculture ministry said it expects a 5to-10 per cent drop in vegetable, fruit and potato production this year.

But German authorities said their reservoirs were at 60 to 80 per cent of capacity and did not foresee imminent crisis.

In Spain, unofficial estimates put the drought damage to crops and cattle at about $250 million, and the use of drinking water in some hard-hit central areas was restricted.

Portugal's worst drought in 120 years has left the Lisbon suburb of Sintra virtually waterless for three weeks, and the rice crop was expected to be down sharply. Agriculture experts said many farmers, foreseeing the shortage, cut back their planting by two thirds.

But there's been too much rain in some parts of Eastern Europe. Officials said tens of thousands of acres in Yugoslavia's Moravia river basin had to be resown after June floods.

The Moscow area in the Soviet Union has had the wettest spring since record-keeping started in the 1880s, and the agriculture department predicted an average or slightly better grain crop of 190 million

State Ends Year In Black—Barely

By DICK HOLMAN Star Staff Writer

Although the state ended the fiscal year Wednesday in the black, the treasury balance was squeezed out to spare change instead of the thick bankroll cushion that was predicted.

The bottom line was approximately $10.5 million short of anticipated receipts.

The official fiscal year 75-76 balance won't be known until Thursday or Friday. Deputy State Tax Commissioner Gary D. Chunka reported a general fund (state tax) remaineder of approximately $1,730,329.

Leading to the close finish after a three-month fiscal crisis, the state shifted some funds temporarily and delayed issuing tax refund check.

23,865 Refunds Mailed

Chunka said the department mailed 23,865 tax refunds totalling $2.93 million Wednesday, the final payments. And the state has paid back the entire $3,712,540 it borrowed from the $4.3 million revenue sharing trust fund to get through a heavy June payout period.

State Budget Administrator John Jacobson said the building fund loan had no effect in hampering any payments due during the three-week period.

Jacobson and Gov. J. James Exon spiked rumors that Nebraska had borrowed money from the university's cash fund. Jacobson said auditors in mid-May found NU had overspent or in effect borrowed $5 million for the state general fund; the dollar movement was not a loan to the state but an ordered payback.

No Crisis Seen

Chunka said the new fiscal year picture paints "no crisis facing us" to repeat the recent crunch. During July it "may be tight," but through December sh flow situation should improve with no problems expected:

Review Favored Jacobson labeled that a "last resort" option, favoring review of appropriations.

Noting past criticism of state surpluses, Jacobson said he prefers closer budgeting. Exon called the positive fund bulance "business like management" even if close.

The Ron Brittenham family, winners of a bicentennial trip to Philadelphia, left Thursday morning from Lincoln for an eightday excursion.

Mr. and Mrs. Ron Bittenham of Lincoln won the trip by being persons 2,000,000 and 2,000,001 to board the U.S. Bicentennial train which was in Omaha last September.

After picking up credentials at the state bicentennial commission headquarters in Lincoln, Brittenham explained the family will spend five days in Philadelphia at the expense of the Omaha-Douglas County Bicentennial Commission, which sponsored the prize, and three more in Washington, D.C., at his own expense. The prize was the idea of

The commission decided to sponsor the prize and got the cooperation of Amtrak which is providing transportation.

By LYLE DENNITON

Washington — The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that judges have very little power to stop the press from publishing stories about criminal cases.

By a unanimous vote, the justices struck down a Nebraska judge's order limiting what newspapers and broadcasting stations could say about a mass murder case in which Erwin C. Siments was convicted.

However, the justices did not issue a broad constitutional ruling to cover all forms of press coverage of criminal cases.

In fact, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger's opinion dwelled at length on the specific facts in the Nebraska case and concluded that the judge's order in that case was unconstitutional.

More significantly, Burger stressed that the court was not ruling out the possiblity that in some future case, a judge's order against press coverage might be upheld because of a clearer threat to the accused person's right to a fair trial.

It was not clear, however, whether any such ultimate decision against the press could get the support of a Supreme Court majority.

In fact, five justices indicated Wednesday that they were in serious doubt that judges could ever stop the press from publishing what it could learn about criminal cases.

Those justices were William J. Brennan

Jr., Thurgood Marshall, Potter Stewart.

John Paul Stevens and Byron R. White. Of those five, Brennan, Marshall and Stewart said flatly that they would rule that courts could not constitutionally lasse orders forbidding the press to publish certain

(However, Stevens added: "Whether the same absolute protection would apply no matter how shabby or illegal the mee which the information is obtained, no matter how serious an intrusion on privacy might be involved, no matter how demonstrably false the information might be, no matter how prejudicial it might be to the interests of innocent persons, no matter how perverse the motivation for publishing it, is a question I would not answer without further

(In addition to joining Burger's opinion, White filed a separate statement expressing "grave doubts . . . whether orders with respect to the press such as were entered in this case would ever be justifiable.")

Burger's opinion, near the end, commented:

"We reaffirm that the guarantees of freedom of expression are not an absolute probibition under all circumstances, but the parriers to prior restraint remain high and the presumption against its use continues in-

An open court hearing was held to determine whether there was enough evidence to go ahead with his prosecution, and a judge barred the press from reporting some of what was said at that hearing even though the hearing was open.

Among the things the press was told it could not publish were references to Simants's confession, physical facts about the scene of the crime including the fact that two of the victims had been sexually assaulted, and testimony from a medical examiner about tests he had made at the

That order remained in effect for more than 10 weeks, until Simants was put on trial in January. He was convicted of first-degree murder and was sentenced to death.

A number of news organizations, including number of Nebraska newspapers and The New York Times and The Chicago Tribune, appealed to the Supreme Court to strike down the judge's order in the case.

order to form a more perfect Union

Washington — The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that judges have very little power to stop the press from publishing stories about criminal cases.

By a unanimous vote, the justices struck down a Nebraska judge's order limiting what newspapers and broadcasting stations could say about a mass murder case in which Erwin C. Simants was convicted.

However, the justices did not issue a broad constitutional ruling to cover all forms of press coverage of criminal cases.

In fact, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger's opinion dwelled at length on the specific facts in the Nebraska case and concluded that the judge's order in that case was unconstitutional

More significantly, Burger stressed that the court was not ruling out the possiblity that in some future case, a judge's order against press coverage might be upheld because of a clearer threat to the accused person's right to a fair trial.

It was not clear, however, whether any such ultimate decision against the press could get the support of a Supreme Court majority.

In fact, five justices indicated Wednesday that they were in serious doubt that judges could ever stop the press from publishing what it could learn about criminal cases.

Those justices were William J. Brennan

Jr., Thurgood Marshall, Potter Stewart, John Paul Stevens and Byron R. White.

Of those five, Brennan, Marshall and Stewart said flatly that they would rule that courts could not constitutionally issue orders forbidding the press to publish certain

(However, Stevens added: "Whether the same absolute protection would apply no matter how shabby or illegal the means by which the information is obtained, no matter how serious an intrusion on privacy might be involved, no matter how demonstrably false the information might be, no matter how prejudicial it might be to the interests of innocent persons, no matter how perverse the motivation for publishing it, is a question I would not answer without further argument.

(In addition to joining Burger's opinion, White filed a separate statement expressing "grave doubts . . . whether orders with respect to the press such as were entered in this case would ever be justifiable.") Burger's opinion, near the end, com-

Rights Not In Conflict

The U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding the press' First Amendment right to cover trials ought to staunch if not altogether halt the epidemic flow of gag orders issuing forth recently, especially since the Erwin Charles Simants case.

The high court held, briefly, that the issue involved in the Nebraska case was not free press versus fair trial, but that the trial court did not go far enough to ensure that Simants got a fair trial - short of unconstitutionally restraining the press.

Simants was convicted early this year in the murders of six members of a Sutherland family last October. He has been sentenced to death. The U.S. Supreme Court struck down Nebraska Supreme Court and lower court orders barring the press from reporting much of what happened in judicial proceedings leading up to the seating of the Simants jury. The arraigning judge and trial judge, at the request of both the defense and prosecution, issued orders restraining press coverage out of the fear that advance publicity would prejudice the defendant's

With maddening frequency in recent years, especially after the Simants case, courts have granted motions barring press coverage of proceedings in criminal cases in order to prevent prejudicial pre-trial publicity. In many cases it has been a lazy way to guarantee a fair trial - and at great expense to the First Amendment, the cornerstone of American freedoms.

The high court remarked on such judicial shortcuts in the Simants case, when Chief Justice Burger said there was no evidence that the Nebraska trial court had attempted to use less drastic measures to ensure Simants a fair trial, such as a change of venue, a delay in the trial, questioning the jurors for bias or sequestering the jury during the trial.

Although three of the justices indicated their belief that the press' First Amendment rights are absolute, a majority still held that prior restraint can be employed under certain donditions; conditions not met, however, in the Nebraska "We reaffirm that the guarantees of freedom of expression are not an absolute prohibition under all circumstances." the majority said, "but the barriers to prior restraint remain high and the presumption against its use continues intact."

The court's unanimous support of that barrier is a somewhat surprising, healthy and welcome development.

The count's ruling not only gives relief to a beleaguered press and warning to gaghappy attorneys and judges, it bespeaks faith in the capability of American juries in a modern world to sort out what is from what might be and render fair verdicts.

Barry To The Rescue

Young liberals often become more conservative as they get older, it is said. And rock-ribbed conservatives can mellow as the years pass.

Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, the conservative extremist GOP presidential nominee in 1964, has most assuredly mellowed.

As party elder statesman, an American folk hero and a responsible spokesman for conservative thought, Goldwater cautioned the nation to "cool it" during the emotionpacked days when Watergate bombshells were being dropped and the Nixon presidency was beginning to crumble. But when convinced of Nixon's complicity, Goldwater forsook ideology and told Nixon to get out. He was not among the last of the die bards.

It is not so surprising, then, to hear of Goldwater's endorsement of President Ford over Ronald Reagan for the GOP presidential nomination this year. Goldwater said it was the "most difficult decision in my life," and he can be forgiven for possibly overstating the case.

The senator said he chose Ford because he believes that the government should not suffer through the reorganization that would be necessary with a change

But it can be speculated that Goldwater now has little stomach for the saber-rattling, anachronistic Reagan campaign line; a line which might have been more pleasing to him 12 years ago.

It is mere speculation, of course, but we're betting Goldwater has come to realize that moderation in the pursuit of our international goals is probably the wisest policy.

And it just might be that the senator's 11th hour endorsement will aid Ford in shoring up softening support.

JAMES

WASHINGTON-The saddest characters in Washington these days are the Republican members of Congress. They are watching the Ford-Reagan fight for the GOP presidential nomination with mounting alarm, fearing that whoever wins this battle will divide the party, lose the White House, and weaken their chances of reelection in November.

Their situation now is bleak enough. The Democrats have held a majority of the House and Senate for 22 consecutive years, and for 39 out of the last 43 years. But with President Ford in the White House, they have at least been able, with the aid of conservative Democrats, to sustain 17 of Ford's 21 vetoes over the last two years.

Now everything seems to be going against them. Not only the popularity polls in the presidential election, which favor Gov. Carter over either President Ford or Gov. Reagan. Not only the trend of voting in the increasingly populous states of the South and West, which are less conservative than in the 50's and

But also the probable switch from moderate Democratic leaders like Mike Mansfield in the Senate and Speaker Albert in the House to more partisan Democratic leaders like Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, and Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill of Massachusetts in the House.

. It would be hard to underestimate the importance of what is happening on Capitol Hill. While the political attention of the nation is on the presidential race, the shifting scene in the Congress could be equally or even more important in the rest Republican leadership on The of the 70's.

The mood of the Congress is obviously changing. Resignations are higher than ever before. The sex scandals have depressed members and their staffs almost as much as the Watergate scandal depressed the executive branch and the bureaucracy, and this is now, coming out in the open in a con-

Hill and the coming Democratic speaker of the House.

REP. JOHN J. RHODES

. . . writes on 'The Futile

System' . . .

The Republican Nightmare

For example, John J. Rhodes of Arizona, the Republican leader of the House, and normally a most cautious and courteous man, has just written the most critical book on the Congress that has appeared in a very long

He calls it "The Futile System" and in his personal atflict between what's left of the tacks of Tip O'Noill, indicate the coming partison struggle in the House of Represent

Rhodes deplores the decline of civility in the Congress in recent years and the rise of personal and partisan acrimony, but he is not exactly civil or impersonal himself.

"The atmosphere in and around the Congress today," he says, "is far more acrid than at any time in my career (he was elected to the 83rd Congress on Nov. 4, 1952). The members are louder, more uptight, hostile and devious. The average congressman has always been partisan, but never so partisan as he is-today . .

"It is certainly not my intention to hand down a blanket indictment," Rhodes says. "But today a large number of congressmen are cynical, abrasive, frequently uncommunicative and ambitious to an inordinate degree. In their eagerness to draw attention to themselves and advance politically - they frustrate the legislative process."

Any reporter condemning the Congress as severely as Minority Leader Rhodes does in this book might be in danger of being thrown out of the press gallery. He attacks the staff system on The Hill and quite rightly too.

When he came to Congress in 1952, he observes, the House and Senate had a combined staff of 4,500 and a budget of $42 million. Now, the staff is 15,000 with a budget of $414 million. But looking to the future, it is the personal comments of Rhodes that may be most important.

He describes Speaker Albert, who has announced his retirement, as a "weak, inefficient" but fair leader and goes on to denounce O'Neill who will undoubtedly ruplace Albert, as "the most partises man I have ever known." Rhodes says that O'Neill is "a gregarious and engaging man," but adds: "he would rather go down to defeat time after time and veto after veto than ever to co-operate substantively with either the minority side or the Republican President of the United States." ☆ ☆ ☆ One of the main Democratic themes of this election, of course, is that the nation needs to get away from the stalemate of "veto government," with the Congress dominated by one party and the White House by another. Rhode's argument is precisely the opposite: that a Democratic government under Carter and a Democratic Congress under Tip O'Neill in the House and Bob Byrd or Hubert Humphrey leading the Senate would be a tidy disaster. Rhodes, of course, is making a partisan argument himself for a Republican Congress, but there is a lot to his general criticism, and it is clear from what he says that Capitol Hill promises to be a stormy partisan battleground in the coming years. The old conservative coalition of the Middle Western Republicans and the Southern Democrats has been breaking up for a long time.

It could still be a force in sustaining a conservative Republican President's vetoes, but if Carter wins, the new Democratic leadership in Congress is likely to be more decisive than at any time since the early days of Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal.

The stellar example is the B-1 bomber which the President himself ordered into production still in the research and development phase. The cost of the bomber has risen 84% above the baseline estimates of 1970 while performance requirements have been lowered, according to the Defense Center.

Competitive bidding is virtually non-existent as the major defense firms share out the contract plums. Here again Rickover's testimony of two years ago is pertinent:

Rights Not In Conflict

The U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding the press' First Amendment right to cover trials ought to staunch if not altogether halt the epidemic flow of gag orders issuing forth recently, especially since the Erwin Charles Simants case.

The high court held, briefly, that the issue involved in the Nebraska case was not free press versus fair trial, but that the trial court did not go far enough to ensure that Simants got a fair trial - short of unconstitutionally restraining the press.

Simants was convicted early this year in the murders of six members of a Sutherland family last October. He has been sentenced to death. The U.S. Supreme Court struck down Nebraska Supreme Court and lower court orders barring the press from reporting much of what happened in judicial proceedings leading up to the seating of the Simants jury. The arraigning judge and trial judge, at the request of both the defense and prosecution, issued orders restraining press coverage out of the fear that advance publicity would prejudice the defendant's way to guarantee a fair trial - and at great expense to the First Amendment, the cornerstone of American freedoms.

The high court remarked on such judicial shortcuts in the Simants case, when Chief Justice Burger said there was no evidence that the Nebraska trial court had attempted to use less drastic measures to ensure Simants a fair trial, such as a change of venue, a delay in the trial, questioning the jurors for bias or sequestering the jury during the trial.

Although three of the justices indicated their belief that the press' First Amendment rights are absolute, a majority still held that prior restraint can be employed under certain donditions; conditions not met, however, in the Nebraska

"We reaffirm that the guarantees of freedom of expression are not an absolute prohibition under all circumstances," the majority said, "but the barriers to prior restraint remain high and the presumption against its use continues intact.'

The court's unanimous support of that barrier is a somewhat surprising, healthy and welcome development.

The court's ruling not only gives relief to a beleaguered press and warning to gaghappy attorneys and judges, it bespeaks faith in the capability of American juries in a modern world to sort out what is from what might be and render fair verdicts.

Barry To The Rescue

Young liberals often become more conservative as they get older, it is said. And rock-ribbed conservatives can mellow as the years pass.

Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, the conservative extremist GOP presidential nominee in 1964, has most assuredly

As party elder statesman, an American folk hero and a responsible spokesman for conservative thought, Goldwater cautioned the nation to "cool it" during the emotionpacked days when Watergate bombshells were being dropped and the Nixon presidency was beginning to crumble. But when convinced of Nixon's complicity, Goldwater forsook ideology and told Nixon to get out. He was not among the last of the die-hards

It is not so surprising, then, to hear of Goldwater's endorsement of President Ford over Ronald Reagan for the GOP presidential nomination this year. Goldwater said it was the "most difficult decision in my life," and he can be forgiven for possibly overstating the case.

The senator said he chose Ford because he believes that the government should not suffer through the reorganization that would be necessary with a change

But it can be speculated that Goldwater now has little stomach for the saber-rattling, anachronistic Reagan campaign line; a line which might have been more pleasing to him 12 years ago.

It is mere speculation, of course, but we're betting Goldwater has come to realize that moderation in the pursuit of our international goals is probably the

And it just might be that the senator's 11th hour endorsement will aid Ford in shoring up softening support.

JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON-The saddest characters in Washington these days are the Republican members of Congress. They are watching the Ford-Reagan fight for the GOP presidential nomination with mounting alarm, fearing that whoever wins this battle will divide the party, lose the White House, and weaken their chances of reelection in November.

Their situation now is bleak enough. The Democrats have held a majority of the House and Senate for 22 consecutive years, and for 39 out of the last 43 years. But with President Ford in the White House, they have at least been able, with the aid of conservative Democrats, to sustain 17 of Ford's 21 vetoes over the last two years.

Now everything seems to be going against them. Not only the opularity polls in the presidential election, which favor Gov. Carter over either President Ford or Gov. Reagan. Not only the trend of voting in the increasingly populous states of the South and West, which are less conservative than in the 50's and

But also the probable switch from moderate Democratic leaders like Mike Mansfield in the Senate and Speaker Albert in the House to more partisan Democratic leaders like Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, and Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill of Massachusetts in the House.

It would be hard to underestimate the importance of what is happening on Capitol Hill. While the political attention of the nation is on the presidential race, the shifting scene in the Congress could be equally or even more important in the rest Republican leadership on The of the 70's.

The mood of the Congress is obviously changing. Resignations are higher than ever before. The sex scandals have depressed members and their staffs almost as much as the Watergate scandal depressed the executive branch and the bureaucracy, and this is now coming out in the open in a conflict between what's left of the

Hill and the coming Democratic speaker of the House.

For example, John J. Rhodes of Arizona, the Republican leader of the House, and normally a most cautious and courteous man, has just written the most critical book on the Congress that has appeared in a very long tacks of Tip O'Neill, indicate the coming partisan struggle in the House of Representatives.

A Carter-Rickover Liaison

Rhodes deplores the decline of civility in the Congress in recent years and the rise of personal and partisan acrimony, but he is not exactly civil or impersonal himself. "The atmosphere in and around the Congress today," he says, "is far more acrid than at any time in my career (he was elected to the 83rd Congress on Nov. 4, 1952). The members are louder, more uptight, hostile and devious. The average congressman has always been partisan, but never so partisan as he is today.

"It is certainly not my intention to hand down a blanket indictment," Rhodes says. "But today a large number of congressmen are cynical, abrasive, frequently uncommunicative and ambitious to an inordinate degree. In their eagerness to draw attention to themselves and advance politically - they frustrate the legislative process.

4 4 4 Any reporter condemning the Congress as severely as Minority Leader Rhodes does in this book might be in danger of being thrown out of the press gallery. He attacks the staff system on The Hill and quite rightly too.

When he came to Congress in 1952, he observes, the House and Senate had a combined staff of 4.500 and a budget of $42 million. Now, the staff is 16,000 with a budget of $414 million. But looking to the future, it is the personal comments of Rhodes that may be most important.

He describes Speaker Albert, who has announced his retire-He calls it "The Futile ment, as a "weak, inefficient" but fair leader and goes on to denounce O'Neill who will undoubtedly replace Albert, as 'the most partisan man I have ever known.'

Rhodes says that O'Neill is "a gregarious and engaging man," but adds: "he would rather go down to defeat time after time and veto after veto than ever to co-operate substantively with either the minority side or the. Republican President of the United States.'

One of the main Democratic themes of this election, of course, is that the nation needs to get away from the stalemate of "veto government," with the Congress dominated by one party and the White House by Rhode's argument is precisely the opposite: that a Democratic government under Carter and a Democratic Congress under Tip O'Neill in the House and Bob Byrd or Hubert Humphrey leading the Senate would be a tidy disaster.

Rhodes, of course, is making a partisan argument himself for a Republican Congress, but there is a lot to his general criticism, and it is clear from what he says that Capitol Hill promises to be a stormy partisan battleground in the coming years.

The old conservative coalition of the Middle Western Republicans and the Southern Democrats has been breaking up for a long time.

It could still be a force in sustaining a conservative Republican President's vetoes, but if Carter wins, the new Democratic leadership in Congress is likely to be more decisive than at any time since the early days of Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal.

MARQUIS CHILDS.

WASHINGTON - In his autobiography, "Why Not The Best?" Jimmy Carter writes of his admiration for Admiral Hyman Rickover whom he rates as an influence on his life second only to that of his parents. The title of the book comes from a question Rickover put to him when Carter was about to assume new responsibility in the development of nuclear propulsion for submarines, which Rickover had pushed against the resistance of traditional-minded

With Rickover still on active duty at 76 and as articulate and outspoken as ever, the Carter connection could prove important should the peanut farmer from Georgia become president. The spunky admiral's latest crusade is directed at the cost

Just this month testifying on the Hill he said that the Defense Department's proposal to settle shipbuilders' claims could become "one of the biggest ripoffs in the history of the United States.

Both Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and Deputy Secretary William P. Clements Jr. recently stressed the need to settle the claims promptly without regard to merit. Earlier this year Rickover had testified:

'Unfortunately contractors appear to be submitting claims in amounts that are based on what they need to make their desired profit, regardless of their own mistakes or inefficiency, rather than that to which they are legally entitled."

The Rickover charges are part of an extensive study by the Center For Defense Information on weapons cost overruns. The Center estimates the cost overruns for current systems at $55 billion. The figures come in part from a report to Congress by the General Accounting Of-The amounts are so stupendous as to be almost beyond imagination. The total baseline cost estimate, normally used prior to making full production decisions, was $121 billion. The current estimate for these major systems is $176 billion, a growth of just under $55 billion. Despite the fantastic rise in costs, only a small part of it attributable to inflation, the Ford administration is ordering production go-aheads. The stellar example is the B-1 bomber which the President himself ordered into production even though the new plane is still in the research and development phase. The cost of the bomber has risen 84% above the baseline estimates of 1970 while performance requirements have been lowered, according to the Defense Center.

Competitive bidding is virtually non-existent as the major defense firms share out the contract plums. Here again Rickover's testimony of two years ago is pertinent:

"About 88% of the defense contract dollars today are placed under other than truly price competitive situations. Design competition, or the so-called competitive negotiated contracts, are not really price competitive.

"Further, it is generally the same contractors who do defense business year after year. It is about as hard for new defense contractors to enter the business as it is for new firms to enter the automobile industry. The investment is so large that many contractors practically become appendages to the government which the government has to support."

1968. Congressional investigation showed that thousands of parts had been left off supposedly completed C-5As and the plane was notoriously inefficient. In striking testimony before a Senate hearing Fitzgerald said that in effect the big defense contractors had become part of government. They were akin to the state corporations Mussolini had created in Italy, combining the worst features of private monopoly and government In his autobiography, Carter describes how Rickover asked him about his standing in his class at Annapolis. He swelled his chest with pride as he replied that he had been 59th in a class of 820. Rickover was not impressed, following up with the question, "Did you do your Tense with his desire to make the best possible impression, the young naval officer finally gulped and said, "No, I didn't always do my best." As he turned away, Rickover asked, "Why not?" and, describing himself as white and shaken, Carter left the room.

Such a close and heroworshipping connection should mean a lot if Carter becomes president. He will surely turn to the crusty admiral for counsel on his dealings with the military.

I am most deeply concerned about the rising number of deaths or grave injuries suffered by motorcycle riders in the State of Nebraska, and most particularly in Lincoln.

It is time that the driver of the automobile or truck realizes that the greatest percentage of motorcycle riders are people interested in economical transportation and serious about the negative effects that the glut of automobiles is having on our environment.

Nothing New

Lincoln, Neb. We noted the editorial appearing in The Star recently entitled "Citizen Onslaught Coming." The article indicated that a winter/summer differential electric rate structure was something new and unique to Lincoln. In fact, this is the third year this type of rate has been in effect for LES. The winter/summer split rate first became effective in Lincoln on Further, this type of rate is used by a large portion of the electric utilities across the nation and their number is increasing. This is because this type of rate structure most clearly relates the cost to serve to the charges billed.

According to the publication, "Federal Power Commission - Rate Schedules for Electric Service," which can be found in the Nebraska Library Commission at 1401 P Street, winter/summer split rates are also used in Nebraska by the Omaha Public Power District and the Fremont Department of Utilities; in Iowa by Iowa Electric Light & Power serving Cedar Rapids and 40 other towns, and by Iowa Power & Light serving Des Moines, Council Bluffs and 33 other towns; in Missouri by Missouri Power & Light serving parts of Kansas City and 14 other towns; by Union Electric serving St. Louis and 92 other towns, and many others. I am sure there are additional utilities from this area who have since adopted this type of rate as some of the data published by FPC is almost two years old.

The article also suggests "some kind of outside expert analysis" of rates may be necessary. LES has used outside expert analysis in rate design as shown in a Star article of April 13, 1974. The winter/summer rates put into effect in June, 1974, were a direct result of the recommendations of Mr. R. S. Kampmeier, who assisted LES in rate studies in the spring of 1974. During the last rate review, the services of the Black & Veach engineering firm of Kansas City, Missouri, were utilized. CLAUDE DICKENS

Violations Of Trust

Grand Island, Neb. It seems that a quarterhorse racetrack is being built in Deshler (Thayer County), Nebraska. This would be fine except for the violations of public trust which have occurred as a result of the project.

Wright Opposes Proposal
Only board member Lloyd Wright of Reynolds voted against the $150,000 addition for Beatrice programs and a possible lease of the Pershing campus.

All nine board members attending unanimously approved the $6,828,468 budget proposal for the three-campus school system. The budget includes an average 8% pay increase for employes and several new programs at each of the campuses - Lincoln, Milford and Fairbury.

The budget proposal is about 18% higher than this year's budget. Anticipated increases in student enrollment, however, plus a 10% tuition increase will offset about 61/2% of the budget increase, Dr. Eicher explained.

The SeTech Board will formally adopt a budget and set a 2.35 mill levy in property tax support from the 15-counties it serves (NWC), effective Aug. 1. Bensman charged the college's governing board has ignored proof of mismanagement of the area office.

Bensman, who took over the job in mid-September last year, made the announcement to a subcommittee of the Western Technical Community College Area (WTCCA) Board of Governors

The subcommittee, which met to consider NWC's response to a recent evaluation by the North Central Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges, could not take action on the resignation. The full board's next meeting is July 21.

"It is still difficult for me to understand how certain individuals can stymie the progress of an institution," Bensman said after the meeting.

"I feel as long as my concerns are still unanswered, I would be an ineffective administrator in trying to deal with the area

"The only salvation is to abolish the area office immediately and bring in new personalities," he said. "Then progress can be Bensman noted that in April, when he presented a list of "administrative concerns" and requested an audit of the area office, he said "either area office personnel needed to go or I needed to go.

Specifically, Bensman and other Nebraska Western College officials have cited difficulties in working with Area Administrator William Ptacek and Business Manager Eldon Teten.

Although the board voted in June to abolish the present area administrative structure and reorganize it, members delayed implementation until June 30,

Civil Air Patrol Mounts Search For Lost Plane

OGDEN, Utah (AP) - Fifteen aircraft and 144 ground and airborne personnel from the Civil Air Patrol in four states were searching late Wednesday for a light plane missing on a flight between California and Nebraska.

The CAP Identified the occupants as Ronald Hatch, 45, the pilot; his wife Joan, 40, and the pilot's parents, Harold and Claire Hatch, said to be in their 60s. All are residents of Sacramento.

Utah CAP spokesman Lt. J. Anthony Ryder said the pilot was commercially rated, experienced and in good health.

The missing plane is a singleengine tan and white 1952 Stinson in good condition, bearing registration number 8015K. Ryder said it was fully equipped with communications gear and an emergency locator beacon, though no signal had been de-

June Ends On Cool, Dry Note Cool temperatures covered Nebraska early

Wednesday, dipping to 53 degrees at Lincoln to equal the record low for the date set in 1959. A low of 45 degrees was recorded at North Platte, while Valentine had 46, Chadron and Alliance 48, and Mullen 49.

Meanwhile, Lincoln has received only .63 of an inch of rainfall during the month of June, compared to a monthly normal of 4.85 inches.

Although it wasn't the driest June on record, it was close. In 1911 Lincoln received only .56 of an inch, the driest June ever.

Even the months of June during the Diray Thirties far exceeded the amount of precipitation this year, the National Weather Service reported.

During June, 1936, Lincoln recorded 1.13 inches of rain. Other June totals during the 1930s included: 1930, 2.95; 1931, 4.42; 1932, 4.46; 1933, 2.53; 1934, 2.47; 1935, 3.81; and 1937, 3.79.

Malone Center Board Sets Up Building Fund

The Malone Community Center Board voted Wednesday night to set up a fund to finance a new building. The fund will begin with $14,910 in bequests from various donors.

Interest from the fund will be used for educational grants to be given by the center.

A group of University of Nebraska-Lincoln architecture students has drawn up preliminary plans for a new building. The board is considering a site adjacent to the present center.

Mason City Sewer Issue Approved

Mason City -- By an overwhelming vote of 90 to 6. Mason City residents okaved a $160,000 bond issue to help finance construction of a municipal sewer system. The special election attracted a big portion of the 116 registered voters in Mason City. The project is to be financed in part with a loan and grant from the Farmers Home Administration, but the federal funds are contingent on several local issues such as hookup fee agreements and the raising of matching funds.

UNL Scholarship Winners Told

Four University of Nebraska-Lincoln agriculture majors will receive $400 Farmland Industries scholarships for the 1978-77 school year. They are: Warren N. Richard, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Richard of Ashland, and Brian D. Schellpeper, 29, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Schellpeper of Stanton.

'Baby Rockets' Said Legal

Scottsbluff (AP) - The state fire marshal's office has returned some 216,000 "baby rockets" to dealers in Scottsbluff after declaring the confiscated fireworks legal. A controversy over whether the devices were the same as illegal "pop bottle rockets" began when the dealers received the rockets from out-of-state companies. The fire marshal's office said illegal rockets explode, while the legal "baby rockets" do not.

Both Exon and Lewis agreed that a special session would not the missing state appropriation.

The committee will propose that all schools be provided with an extra 6% in addition to their allotted portion of state funds in order to reimburse them for interest paid on loans or for interest lost due to the expenditure of funds that would have

Total cost of that addition was pegged at about $75,000, based on an assumption of 6% interest over a six-month period.

Lewis said a special session to immediately appropriate the money could be futile.

Even if the funds were apbe needed since schools can propriated, the state does not either dip into their reserves or appear to have sufficient money borrow money to make up for on hand to pay them out, he said

Besides, Lewis said, he does not like the idea of a summer special session.

"Bloodletting is a winter sport." he smiled.

Due to legislative changes in the state aid payment schedule, the schools did not get $2.5 million which they had expected to receive during their fiscal year ending Aug. 31.

"An oversight," Lewis said. 'I am convinced that it was only a unintentional oversight," Exon agreed.

In a letter submitted to Lewis. he said a Department of Administrative Services survey indicates that "adequate cash reserves exist in most school districts to handle the problem" until next January's regular legislative session.

. . money could be borrowed or expenditures cut in the few districts which do not have adequate reserves." the governor said.

(The Lincoln School District's share of the $2.5 million represents only 4.7% of its budgeted reserve.)

Sen. Myron Rumery of North Platte said it is important that the state "keep its word" and provide the $2.5 million in a future appropriation.

Committee recommendations were approved on a 7-0 vote.

Civil Air Patrol Mounts Search For Lost Plane

OGDEN, Utah (AP) - Fifteen aircraft and 144 ground and airborne personnel from the Civil Air Patrol in four states were searching late Wednesday for a light plane missing on a flight between California and Nebraska.

The CAP identified the occupants as Ronald Hatch, 45, the pilot; his wife Joan, 40, and the pilot's parents, Harold and Claire Hatch, said to be in their 60s. All are residents of Sacra-

Utah CAP spokesman Lt. J. Anthony Ryder said the pilot was commercially rated, experienced and in good health.

The missing plane is a singleengine tan and white 1952 Stinson in good condition, bearing registration number 8015K. Ryder said it was fully equipped with communications gear and an emergency locator beacon, though no signal had been detected Ryder said the party left Sacramento Tuesday morning, landed at Elko, Nev., refueled at Ogden and left for Wyoming. The group was last heard from at Ogden.

Mason City Sewer Issue Approved

Nebraska

Across

Mason City - By an overwhelming vote of 90 to 6, Mason City residents okayed a $160,000 bond issue to help finance construction of a municipal sewer system. The special election attracted a big portion of the 116 registered voters in Mason City. The project is to be financed in part with a loan and grant from the Farmers Home Administration, but the federal funds are contingent on several local issues such as hookup fee agreements and the raising of matching funds.

Fertilizer Supplies Adequate

By DOMINICK COSTELLO Farm Editor

Nebraska farmers can anticipate adequate supplies of fertilizers and agricultural chemicals in the next 10 years, but there will be problems with transportation and delivery.

This assessment of the future farm supplies was made by Ned Case, chief agronomist for the Phillips Petroleum Co. which makes both fertilizer and chemicals for farmers.

"Storage continues to be a problem. The entire year's supply as to be moved and used within four weeks which always causes transportation problems. We need more storage at the retail level and on farms," he

Case said prices of fertilizers and chemicals depend to a large extent on what world oil prices do and how cold it gets this

"If we should get a really cold winter causing natural gas to be withheld from fertilizer plants in favor of homes, hospitals, etc., it could leave us short of nitrogen. But you can't predict that," he said.

Case makes an annual trip through the Midwest visiting university specialists to discuss research projects involving his company's products.

"I see some major changes coming in the way fertilizer recommendations are made. The soil test alone isn't enough to make a recommendation. We now cosider the farmer's whole management system, plant population, even the crop variety he uses," he said.

Case said researchers in companies and universities are taking a "system's or team approach to crop production problems."

The new methods of research and use of fertilizers are providing jobs for young people interested in a career in agriculture.

"We are seeing more agronomists hired by companies like Phillips. They are salesmen who can really answer questions. The local dealer or county agent is very important in the fertilizer recommendation process under these new methods," he said.

Case said farmers need to carry the message of the importance of agricultural exports to non-farmers. "Those farm exports are keeping our balance of trade operating. Without it we would see tremendous inflation and couldn't import oil," he

Corn Harvest Will Be 5% Above 1975

The Cornhusker State's farmers plan to harvest 6.2 million acres of corn this year, an incrase of 5% over 1975.

Additionally, farmers planted seven million acres to corn this year, 8% above 1975 and the largest acreage since 1953, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The wheat harvet is expected to encompass three million acres, 2% below 1975 but up 2% from earlier forecats. Apparently, some what intended to be destraoyed in April was not abandoned, the reporting service said.

There were 3.4 million acres planted to wheat this year, up 6% from 1975.

Farmers planted 2.25 million acres of sorghum, 10% more than last year and 2% over April intentions. More than two million acres are expected to be harvest, up 9% from last year.

Soybean acres planted at 1,-050,000 acres are down 16% from 1975, the lowest planting since 1972.

Harvested soybeans are expected to total 1,000,000 acres, also down 16% from 1975.

Restoring Houses Is Popular Project

A year ago at this time I was in Fort Smith, Ark., looking for the house in which my father had been born in 1896. I found it in the Historic Preservation District, which the citizens of Fort Smith established to save historically significant old_ houses in that city.

The present owners of designated houses in the district receive reductaions in property taxes in exchange for work they do on their houses to bring them into conformity with the original appearance. Some of the houses have been fully restored inside as well as out. Several are open for visiting.

A number of others have been refurbished inside so that their rooms are usable as specialty shops, residences, offices or residences. The whole district provides a ascinating view of how Fort Smith grew and changed from the time the first brick house was built in 1846 or so, right on through the Victorian era. The Victorian houses are exciting. They have been restored to their original colors. I was very surprised to discover that the colors the Victorians used on their houses were varied and bright.

Several paint companies have issued old house colors, duplicating some of the authentic colors which have been found under the modern bland coats Victorian houses around the country have worn since the 1940s

Fort Smith's undertaking in historic preservation is a classic example of an exciting, inspiring Bicentennial celebration, which will have lasting impact on its community. They started their project several years ago, and since its inception it has received enthusiastic support.

The first year a tour to look at some of the old houses was

So much is being said this year about our national Bicentennial on the basis of 1776-1976. From an historical point of view, however, we are entitled to be celebrating our Bicentennial for the next 10 years and more.

The Revolutionary War ended in 1783, so that is a year to celebrate. The Constitution of the United States was written in 1787 and adopted in 1788 after ratification by the requisite nine states. First President of the United States George Washington was inaugurated April 30, 1789 in New York City.

While July 4, 1776 has a strong emotional impact because of the Declaration of Independence, the war itself, the winning of peace, and the establishment of nation under one central government rate recognition as events equally worthy of a Bicentennial celebration.

In the context of celebrating our nation for the next decade, all of us of all ages will have time to think about how and why the nation was founded and where it is going.

Many kinds of activities to recognize history and to enrich the present can be undertaken. and senior citizens, who have so much insight from the past to offer, can play as active a role as they choose in the events in their locality.

The Fort Smith project was spearheaded by older persons who were conscious of the heritage which would be lost if the old houses were not protected. The young are full of questions about "how it was," and the old can answer them.

Restoring Houses Is Popular Project

By JOANNE FARRIS

Fort Smith, Ark., looking for the house in which my father had been born in 1896. I found it in the Historic Preservation District, which the citizens of Fort Smith established to save historically significant old houses in that city.

The present owners of designated houses in the district receive reductaions in property taxes in exchange for work they do on their houses to bring them into conformity with the original appearance. Some of the houses have been fully restored inside as well as out. Several are open for visiting

A number of others have been refurbished inside so that their rooms are usable as specialty shops, residences, offices or residences. The whole district provides a fascinating view of how Fort Smith grew and changed from the time the first brick house was built in 1846 or so, right on through the Victorian era. The Victorian houses are exciting. They have been restored to their original colors. I was very surprised to discover that the colors the Victorians used on their houses were varied and bright.

Several paint companies have issued old house colors, duplicating some of the authentic colors which have been found under the modern bland coats Victorian houses around the country have worn since the

Fort Smith's undertaking in historic preservation is a classic example of an exciting, inspiring Bicentennial celebration, which will have lasting impact on its community. They started their project several years ago, and since its inception it has received enthusiastic support.

The first year a tour to look at some of the old houses was

So much is being said this year about our national Bicentennia on the basis of 1776-1976. From an historical point of view, however, we are entitled to be celebrating our Bicentennial for the next 10 years and more.

The Revolutionary War ended in 1783, so that is a year to celebrate. The Constitution of the United States was written in 1787 and adopted in 1788 after ratification by the requisite nine states. First President of the United States George Washington was inaugurated April 30, 1789 in New York City.

While July 4, 1776 has a strong emotional impact because of the Declaration of Independence, the war itself, the winning of peace, and the establishment of a nation under one central government rate recognition as events equally worthy of a Bicentennial celebration.

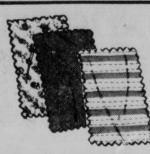

In the context of celebrating our nation for the next decade, all of us of all ages will have time to think about how and why the nation was founded and where it

Many kinds of activities to recognize history and to enrich the present can be undertaken, and senior citizens, who have so much insight from the past to offer, can play as active a role as they choose in the events in their

The Fort Smith project was spearheaded by older persons who were conscious of the heritage which would be lost if the old houses were not protected. The young are full of questions about "how it was," and the old can answer them.

Humane Society Director Bernard Patton said the society has picked up an armadillo which was later reclaimed — and a boa constrictor, found on Vine St.

There are native wildlife specimens such as groundhogs and woodchucks from window wells, opossums and raccoons, squirrels who inhabited houses, and, skunks, probably the most difficult to capture.

The society has raised baby rabbits whose mother was killed by a lawnmower.

These animals — "we are stocking Wilderness Park," Patton said — are released

Poultry - geese and chickens - are kept at the society, supplying employes with eggs. They also have accumulated a variety of ducks, Patton said. The most unusual are two runner ducks, which stand like penguins and run perpendicular to the ground.

Patton said the runner ducks were tossed over a fence onto Humane Society grounds early one morning.

Anyone can claim animals from the menagerie, Patton said; including a parrot, which was caught in a brush pile in University Place, and Hoagie, a monkey who escaped from a carnival.

Apparently, the monkey, still wearing collar and chain, escaped as the carnival passed through College View, leaving town. "It took two days to get her down," Pat-

The society had two goats: Nanny, recently deceased, who had been dropped at the Waverly dump, and Billy, who was found tied to a post at Old Cheney Road. There are two sheep.

ever reclaimed her, Patton said. Lyle entered the fold as a lamb. He had been kidnapped by some boys who later chickened out of their exploit and left him in Pioneer Park.

Star Staff Writer

Watch the bureaucrats, politicians and lobbyists at work in their street planning laboratory.

The process has been going on for sometime now. The parts of the new creation are ready to be put together.

Will it be a useful creature? Or will it rear up suddenly before the year 2,000 and threaten to swallow up the taxpayer or vomit a mess of congestion all over the community.

No one knows for sure. The crystal ball remains dark. The spirits don't answer.

Meanwhile the bureaucrats, politicians, lobbyists, interested citizens scurry busily. What are they cooking up?

Some call the creation a blueprint for the future. Some call it a guide.

It isn't binding on anyone, but it very likely will be used as ammunition in the battles of the future in street widening, road construction and traffic routing.

And so battles are being fought already. They threaten to become more contentious as the day for final assembly of the creature draws

Decision Nears

How near is that day? No one knows precisely, but probably before the snow flies.

So far six alternative street improvement plans have been concocted, ranging in price from $130.5 million in cost at today's prices to $250.2 million.

Three basic plans were originally created to provide a range of choices. Three plans have evolved since then, all three falling between the least expensive and middle-ranking basic altermittee alternate, was approved recently by Mayor Helen Boosalis, County Board Chairman

Bruce Hamilton and Deputy State Engineer Charles Nutter, the members of the committee.

Other alternatives have been recommended by a group of transportation planners known as the Technical Committee and by the staff of the City-County Planning Department.

Elements Listed

Here are some of the major elements of the frontrunning alternate:

- construction of a superhighway, called the West Bypass, to link Interstate 80 with Hwy. 77. There would be interchanges at major streets in West Lincoln.

 construction of a two-lane road to link Holdrege St. with 9th and 10th St., paving the way for eventually closing 16th and 17th at the University of Nebraska campus.

- widening those portions of 84th which are not now four-lane to that width.

-making a one-way pair out of 20th, 21st and 22nd from Holdrege to K St. out of 20th and 21st in places and 21st and 22nd in other places.

-widening West Cornhusker Hwy. - extending N. 27th to Interstate 80, where an interchange would be built.

Tonight at 7 p.m. at East High School those interested citizens are scheduled to vote on the alternate they would like to see become the guide for the next twenty-five years.

The next group to turn its attention to the street improvement plans will be the City-County Planning Commission.

From then it goes to the two groups with decision-making power, the City Council and the Lancaster County Board. They are the ones who will make the decision on what alternative a actually will be selected.

Points of controversy are emerging. Some have roots in the past, such as the Northeast Radial, the super-highway from Havelock to downtown which was scrapped after an upheaval of public opposition.

Others are new, such as the recent flurry of criticism from residents near 64th about the probosal to widen the street to four lanes along its length.

Business Favors Bigger Plans

So far in the street planning process a few generalizations can be made from comments made during public meetings on positions being taken by groups and individuals.

Generally, business interests favor more ambitious street improvement plans. Chamber of Commerce spokesmen have expressed opposition to the frontrunning plan approved by the Officials Committee.

The Chamber fears that the plan will not move traffic at the speed it should move, and that its adoption means traffic tieups in the

The League of Women Voters, on the other hand, supports the least ambitious of the alternates, noting that it entails the least disruption due to street projects.

Some citizens have followed the street planning process from its early days. Generally their comments favor less ambitious plans.

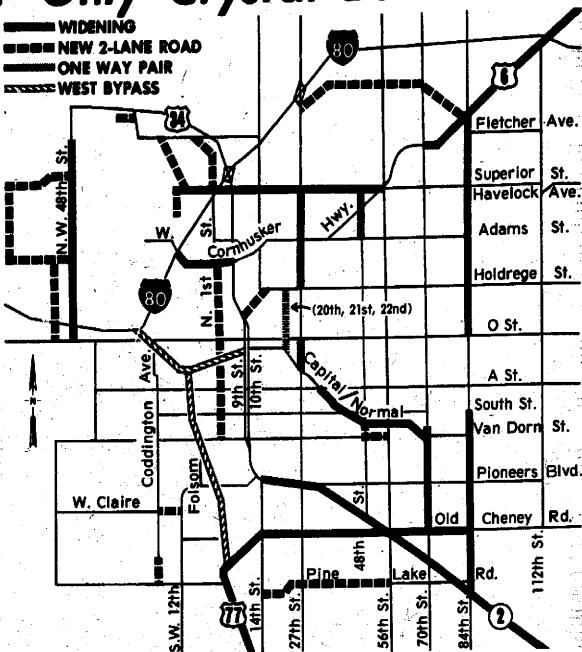

Another class of interested citizens are those interested almost exclusively in plans in their neighborhoods. In that class one neighborhood schism has been revealed in the linton neighborhood.

Although the official Clinton Neighborhood Association stands opposed to any road in the path of the Northeast Radial, some citizens have urged that a street be constructed, although on a much lower scale than the Northeast Diagonal superhighway.

Street Plan's Based On Two Key Premises

By GORDON WINTERS Star Staff Writer

The wise man builds his house upon the rock, but the foolish man builds his house upon the sand, according to any old hymn.

Upon just what foundation the city's street improvement is being built is open to conjecture. The only consensus on the matter is that it's controversial.

The plan is being shaped on two premises, each with critics and supporters.

One premise is that the city should stop expanding to the east, at least until the year 2000, and expand to the north, south and west.

The other premise is that as time passes more and more people are going to stop riding alone in their cars. The trend, according to this premise, is toward more doubling up and carpooling.

Most opposition to the first premise has come from businessmen. The Chamber of Commerce has gone on record against the proposal.

The arguments used against the premise are that east is the natural direction for the city to grow, toward Omaha. Critics point out that a number of industries, inlocated east of Lincoln.

On the other side of the argument stand citizen groups like the Audubon Society, the League of Women Voters, other citizens, and officials such as Mayor Helen

They contend that further expansion to the east means entering the Stevens Creek watershed, which entails building a new costly sewage treatment plant, and ends up being ubran sprawl.

Because of that document, the goal of encouraging city development in other directions will be part of the official city Comprehensive Plan.

Opposition to the second premise, that carpooling will increase, again comes from businessmen, as represented by the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce. Joining the businessmen are professionals in transportation, who argue that measures to encourage carpooling

If the city bases its transportation planning on that premise, they argue, streets will be much more congested than predicted if more carpooling is not achieved.

The goal, stated statistically, is that by the year 2000, every car should carry an average of 1.75 people, instead of the present 1.24.

However, the premise is supported by the League of Women Voters, which contends that it is reasonable to assume that carpooling will increase as citizens try to conserve energy.

The premise has also won tacit support from Mayor Helen Boosalis, County Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton and Deputy State Engineer Charles Nutter who approved a plan based on the premise.

Regulation Backfire

"How would Nebraskans like it if there were more nonresident pheasant hunters than residents?" asked Colorado conservation officer Judd Cooney. "Not very damn well, that's how they'd like it and Coloradoans feel the same way." Cooney, of Pagosa Springs, Colo., was referring to the big game hunting regulations in affect for the second year in his home state. The regulations, in summary, provide for a "one and-only" permit for deer or elk hunters.

Basically, the regulation was set to distribute the pressure of our season," Cooney explained. "Before, we could have as many as 200,000 deer and elk hunters in the field at one time. That prompted the one-and-only senser.

The one-and-only permit, which limits an individual to hunt with either bow or rifle, not both, for deer and elk, was aimed at dispersing the pressures of license draws and hunting numbers in the field at one time, according to the 15-year conservation officer. "At one time, we had it where I could get an archery license, kill an elk with a bow, then get a rifle license and kill an elk with a rifle," he said. "You can't do that any more." Cooney, who is one of the nation's top bowhunting authorities, said the regulation has backfired for the state. It has been an economic bust for Colorado in loss of license revenues and has not significantly affected the kill by hunters.

Best Bowhunters Out

"It was aimed to knock down the fiel pressure but wasn't supposed to have much affect on the bow hunter," Cooney said. "But what it did was eliminate the guy who would trophy hunt with his bow and then meat hunt with his rifle. Since he couldn't do both, he simply applied for a rifle permit, not a bow permit.

"And the bow bag didn't decline because just the best bowhunters were in the field," Cooney continued. "So what we did was we lost the revenue of the guy who wanted both permits and didn't decrease our animal take."

And another shocker of the system is the ratio of resident to nonresident hunters in Colorado.

Last year noncesidents exceeded resident elk hunters," Cooney said. "Deer hunting pressure in the state was down about 50 per cent over last year and nonresidents are gaining on residents. there, 100.

Colorado recently imposed an increase in nonresident big game licenses, going to $90 for deer and $135 for elk. Residents hunt at $13 per deer and $16 per elk.

We'll probably have a decline in the number of hunters this year for elk but it won't last," said Cooney for the incremed feet. "People aren't going to grip much about that. They'll be back. The cost of everything is up so why not licenses.

But what gripes Cooney and a number of other hunters in the state is the one-and-only philosophy.

"The one-and-only isn't any good to the economy," he explained. "We've proved that. And if they're worried about the kill, they should limit it to one animal per year per individual, whether it by by bow, muzzleloader or rifle. That way you could still trophy heat with a bow and, if you didn't get your deer or elk, you could meat heat with your rifle. And you'd be regaining some

As Cooney says, there isn't a state in the country these days which can afford any loss of revenue in game management. For-tunately, Nebraska's Game and Parts Commission turned down a similar one and only proposal last year on just those same

Evert, Goolagong In Finals

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert endured her first tough match of the Wimbledon tennis tournament Wednesday and defeated Martina Navratilova 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 to reach the final.

She will play for the title Friday against her old Australian rival, Evonne Goolagong, whom she has never beaten on

Miss Goolagong won 6-1, 6-2 against a nervous and off-form Virginia Wade, the last British survivor.

In Thursday's men's semifinals, Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., conquerer of top-seed Jimmy Connors, meets Bjorn Borg and Ilie Nastase faces Raul

Ramirez Miss Evert, favorite for the crown, had previously strolled through five matches without dropping a set, losing a total of only 10 games. It had all been too easy.

Suddenly she found herself with a job on her hands. Miss Navratilova, the sturdy exiled Czech left-hander who lives in Beverly Hills, Calif., played aggressive tennis and hit a lot of tough strokes. A stiff breeze, swirling around the bowl of the center court, did not make it easier for Miss Evert to cope with her opponent's big serve and volley game.

One service break helped Miss Evert to win the first set comfortably, and she broke service to lead 3-2 in the second set and seemed to be on her way. But then Miss Navratilova warmed up and began hitting her most damaging shots.

The Czech broke back at 3-3, and broke

She was hitting the ball hard and volleying at clever angles, and Miss Evert was kept on the run and forced into errors.

The star from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was as cool as ever, but her game lost its usual compact look. Three games went against service at the start of the third set, and with the Czech playing more confidently than ever, it looked as if anything might

Chris held her service to love to lead 3-1, and held on grimly to her lead. In the eighth game she trailed 0-30 on her service and was in real danger, but Miss Navratilova played some loose shots and lost her chance.

"I-wanted a tough match, and I got it," Miss Evert said afterwards.

"The wind was going round in circles, and it was tough for me to return her service, because she is a lefty and puts so much spin on it. I was satisfied, but I will have to play a lot better if I am to win the

Miss Evert said she was not satisfied with the number of first services she got in. "I shall have to get in at least 80 per cent against Evonne," Chris said. "She will come in on my second serve - I know

The last time these two met at Wimbledon was in the semifinals in 1972, Miss Evert's first year here. That time Mrs. Cawley, then Miss Goolagong, won in three sets. She had won the crown in 1971, and Miss Evert won it in 1974.

Miss Goolagong had an easy time Wednesday, Center court nerves - a common complain in Wimbledon's 99-year history - hit Virginia Wade like an attack of flu or food poisoning. She threw the ball up wildly, missed with her first service, netted volleys, hit wild shots out of court.

After an exchange of service breaks which left Mrs. Cawley leading 2-1, the British player had a bad spell in which she could do nothing right and lost eight games in a row. A subdued crowd of 17,000 on the center court, hoping for a British success, suffered with her.

Miss Goolagong let her opponent make the mistakes and raked in the points, but from time to time she hurried things along with killing volleys and backhand passes. Miss Wade finally snapped out of her bad streak and won two service games.

Miss Wade said afterwards: "Evonne's game was ideally suited to the conditions the wind and the low bounce on the grass. If she plays like this in the final she will have a slight edge over Chris."

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

If your average golfer was off the edge of the green in two shots and took five more to get the ball in the hole, it's likely that's all you could expect to hear about, how that one hole ruined a good round.

Christie Schwartzkopf prefers to dwell on the positive aspects of her golf game.

Maybe that's why she shrugged off the effects of one horrendous hole and countered with backto-back birdies to hold a one-shot lead going into the final day of the Lincoln Women's City Golf Tournament.

Schwartzkopf, a two-shot leader after Tuesday's opening round at Lincoln Country Club, held a one-shot margin over Jean Hyland after shooting a five-over-par 84 at Holmes Park Wednesday.

The two will be grouped together, along with Christie's mother, defending champion Dorothy Schwartzkopf, when the tournament wraps up at Hillcrest Country Club Thursday. Christie's 36 hole total of 164 is five shots better than her mother's 169, but just a single shot under Hyland's 165 total. The threesome represents a golfing dynasty

although Chrisae has never won the Lincoln tournament while amassing four state match play

Christie was well on her way to maintaining her margin over the rest of the field when she met up with unlucky No. 13, a 363-yard ladies par five. After two shots to just short of the green, she chipped well past the close cut pin and took four putts to get the ball back to the hole. But she countered with a birdie two on No. 14 and a birdle four on No. 15.

'I had to do something after that," Christie said. "But I'd rather talk about the good parts. I played one hole perfectly."

Her favorite topic of conversation was earle

Despite scoring the eagle, Christie has a tendency to look at it as just a birdie by her stan-"Par, men's or ladies, is just a standard to wind," she added. 'I'm not concerned with what the scorecard says, but what seems reasonable to me at the time I'm playing."

Christie and her playing partners Jane Deeter and Sally Roper had to overcome a little more adversity than the other participants. On the 15th hole, a prankster came out of the and birdied the hole, but Roper could manage no better than bogey. Christie is looking forward to her final round at Hillcrest. "I like the course," she said. "I played there for so many years when we were members, I just consider it my home course."

Hyland and both Schwartzkopfs will tee off at 8 a.m. for the final 18 holes.

Maloney Acquitted

TORONTO (UPI) - Dan Maloney of the Detroit Red Wings Wednesday became the second hockey player in less than a year and the third player ever to be cleared of assault charges in connection with on-ice

Maloney, who was charged with assault in connection with a fight last November involving Toronto Maple Leafs' defenseman Brian Glennie, was acquitted after a jury of eight women and four men deliberated for nine hours. Jury foreman Raymond Bower announced the not guilty verdict.

"I feel very relieved...very, very relieved," said Maloney, who joined the Red Wings last season as compensation for the signing of free agent Marcel Dionne by the Los Angeles Kings. "I really appreciate the jury's decision and I just want to get back to hockey.

Maloney, a gritty left wing known for his prowess in the corners, said he would contime "playing hockey the way I have always played it and the way I play it best. I'm just very glad to have this over with."

Bower, however, read an additional statement from the panel stating, "while our verdict was based on the evidence singer Claudine Longet Wednesday testified her love affair with pro skier Vladimir "Spider" Sabish had soured and they agreed to separate weeks before she allegedly shot him to death in their mountain chalet.

Longet's testimony was her first since Sabich, 31, was shot March 21.

Longet, former wife of singer Andy Williams, said she and Sabich decided at least one month before the shooting that she and her children would move from the chalet. She gave no reason for the breakup of the affair.

Longet, showing no emotion while testifying, said she moved into the Sabich home in June 1975, because "he asked me to come and live with him." She said she first met Sabich, a former world pro ski champion, in 1971.

Longet was called to testify because of conflicting evidence on the location of a introduced by the prosecution.

Cooney, of Pagosa Springs, Colo., was referring to the big game hunting regulations in affect for the second year in his home state. The regulations, in summary, provide for a "one-and-only" permit for deer or elk hunters.

'Basically, the regulation was set to distribute the pressure of our season," Cooney explained. "Before, we could have as many as 200,000 deer and elk hunters in the field at one time. That prompted the one-and-only season."

The one-and-only permit, which limits an individual to hunt with either bow or rifle, not both, for deer and elk, was aimed at dispersing the pressures of license draws and hunting numbers in the field at one time, according to the 15-year conservation officer.

kill an elk with a bow, then get a rifle license and kill an elk with a rifle," he said. "You can't do that any more.

Cooney, who is one of the nation's top bowhunting authorities, said the regulation has backfired for the state. It has been an economic bust for Colorado in loss of license revenues and has not

"It was aimed to knock down the fiel pressure but wasn't supposed to have much affect on the bow hunter," Cooney said. "But what it did was eliminate the guy who would trophy hunt with his bow and then meat hunt with his rifle. Since he couldn't do both, he

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Chris Evert endured her first tough match of the Wimbledon tennis tournament Wednesday and defeated Martina Navratilova 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 to reach the final.

She will play for the title Friday against her old Australian rival, Evonne Goolagong, whom she has never beaten on

Miss Goolagong won 6-1, 6-2 against a nervous and off-form Virginia Wade, the last British survivor.

In Thursday's men's semifinals, Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., conquerer of top-seed Jimmy Connors, meets Bjorn Borg and Ilie Nastase faces Raul Ramirez.

Miss Evert, favorite for the crown, had previously strolled through five matches without dropping a set, losing a total of only 10 games. It had all been too easy.

Suddenly she found herself with a job on her hands. Miss Navratilova, the sturdy exiled Czech left-hander who lives in Beverly Hills, Calif., played aggressive tennis and hit a lot of tough strokes.

A stiff breeze, swirling around the bowl of the center court, did not make it easier for Miss Evert to cope with her opponent's big serve and volley game.

One service break helped Miss Evert to win the first set comfortably, and she broke service to lead 3-2 in the second set and seemed to be on her way. But then Miss Navratilova warmed up and began hitting her most damaging shots.

The Czech broke back at 3-3, and broke again at 6-4 to tie the match at one set all. She was hitting the ball hard and volleying at clever angles, and Miss Evert was kept on the run and forced into errors.

The star from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was as cool as ever, but her game lost its usual compact look. Three games went against service at the start of the third set, and with the Czech playing more confidently than ever, it looked as if anything might

Chris held her service to love to lead 3-1, and held on grimly to her lead. In the eighth game she trailed 0-30 on her service and was in real danger, but Miss Navratilova played some loose shots and lost her chance.

"I-wanted a tough match, and I got it," Miss Evert said afterwards.

"The wind was going round in circles, and it was tough for me to return her service, because she is a lefty and puts so much spin on it. I was satisfied, but I will have to play a lot better if I am to win the

Miss Evert said she was not satisfied with the number of first services she got in. "I shall have to get in at least 80 per cent against Evonne," Chris said. "She will come in on my second serve - I know

The last time these two met at Wimbledon was in the semifinals in 1972, Miss Evert's first year here. That time Mrs. Cawley, then Miss Goolagong, won in three sets. She had won the crown in 1971, and Miss Evert won it in 1974.

Miss Goolagong had an easy time Wednesday. Center court nerves - a common complain in Wimbledon's 99-year history — hit Virginia Wade like an attack of flu or food poisoning.

She threw the ball up wildly, missed with her first service, netted volleys, hit wild shots out of court. After an exchange of service breaks which left Mrs. Cawley leading 2-1, the British player had a bad spell in which she could do nothing right and lost eight games in a row. A subdued crowd of 17,000 on the center court, hoping for a British success, suffered with her.

Miss Goolagong let her opponent make the mistakes and raked in the points, but from time to time she hurried things along with killing volleys and backhand passes. Miss Wade finally snapped out of her bad streak and won two service games.

Miss Wade said afterwards: "Evonne's game was ideally suited to the conditions - the wind and the low bounce on the grass. If she plays like this in the final she will have a slight edge over Chris.

Schwartzkopf 'Positively' Leads Tourney

Christie Schwartzkopf prefers to dwell on the positive aspects of her golf game.

Maybe that's why she shrugged off the effects of one horrendous hole and countered with backto-back birdies to hold a one-shot lead going into the final day of the Lincoln Women's City Golf

Schwartzkopf, a two-shot leader after Tuesday's opening round at Lincoln Country Club, held a one-shot margin over Jean Hyland after shooting a five-over-par 84 at Holmes Park

The two will be grouped together, along with Christie's mother, defending champion Dorothy Schwartzkopf, when the tournament wraps up at Hillcrest Country Club Thursday.

Christie's 36-hole total of 164 is five shots better than her mother's 169, but just a single shot under Hyland's 165 total.

The threesome represents a golfing dynasty although Christie has never won the Lincoln tournament while amassing four state match play

Christie was well on her way to maintaining her margin over the rest of the field when she met up with unlucky No. 13, a 363-yard ladies par five. After two shots to just short of the green, she chipped well past the close cut pin and took four putts to get the ball back to the hole.

But she countered with a birdie two on No. 14 and a birdie four on No. 15.

"I had to do something after that," Christie said. "But I'd rather talk about the good parts. I played one hole perfectly.

Her favorite topic of conversation was eagle

"It varies day to day by the weather and the wind," she added. 'I'm not concerned with what the scorecard says, but what seems reasonable to me at the time I'm playing.

Christie and her playing partners Jane Deeter and Sally Roper had to overcome a little more adversity than the other participants.

On the 15th hole, a prankster came out of the trees bordering the dog-legged hole, picked up all three balls and began to run with them. 'We were just kind of stunned for a minute," Christie said.

Deeter was the first to react. Then I yelled, 'Hey, you turkey, put those balls back," Deeter said. "He mixed them up and threw them back on the ground and said, 'Oh. were these yours? Deeter and Schwartzkopf both shook it off and birdied the hole, but Roper could manage no

TORONTO (UPI) - Dan Maloney of the Detroit Red Wings Wednesday became the second hockey player in less than a year and the third player ever to be cleared of assault charges in connection with on-ice

Maloney, who was charged with assault in connection with a fight last November involving Toronto Maple Leafs' defenseman Brian Glennie, was acquitted after a jury of eight women and four men deliberated for nine hours. Jury foreman Raymond Bower announced the not guilty verdict.

"I feel very relieved...very, very Red Wings last season as compensation for the signing of free agent Marcel Dionne by the Los Angeles Kings. "I really appreciate the jury's decision and I just want to get back to hockey.

The prosecution's case, which consisted of presenting nine witnesses and several exhibits, including a videotape of the alleged assault which the jury took into deliberations, centered around the premise that criminal offenses committed in a hockey rink are not exempt from the law.

The prosecution presented testimony from witnesses of the incident Nov. 5 at Maple Leaf Gardens, who said Maloney punched Glennie from behind, knocked him to the ice, hit him again, and twice picked him up and dropped him.

McGee also put in the record medical testimony that Glennie sustained a mild concussion after the incident and was hospitalized overnight.

However, when Glennie was called to testify, he acknowledged readily that hockey players stand ready to accept physical assault when they take the ice and said he bore Maloney no ill will for his at-conflicting evidence on the location of a black diary with worn edges investigators said they found on a bedroom dresser. The diary was not on the dresser in a set of defense photographs as it was in pictures

She identified the diary shown in the defense pictures as her own but denied it had been on the dresser. The diary reportedly detailed her deteriorating relationship with Sabich and was an item the defense wanted suppressed as 'The book was in my top drawer," said Longet, who pleaded innocent June 10 at a preliminary hearing to the felony manslaughter of Sabich. "It wasn't on my dresser. I'd never leave it there.'

Before Longet testified, a security guard at the subdivision where Sabich's chalet was located said he was the first to reach the home after the shooting.

Pittsburgh

Kearney - Former Kearney State running back Randy Butts Wednesday signed a contract with the Pittsburgh Steelers. The Steelers drafted Butts in the 16th round of this year's college player draft. Practice begins July 7 as the defending World Champions prepare for the College All-Star Game in Chicago July 23.

Butts was named to the Sunday Journal and Star State College Football Team his junior and senior years.

Butts will be tried mostly as a kick return specialist. He holds the Kearney State kickoff return record, 95 yards. As a halfback, Butts averaged 75.6 yards per game and 30.6 yards per return. In two years at Kearney State Butts gained more than 1,000 yards from his tailback spot and returned kickoffs for more than 500 yards. Butts attended the University of Nebraska for two years before transferring to Kearney State.

NU Baseball Gets Schnoor

Chuck Schnoor, multisport standout from Minden, has signed a national letter of intent to play baseball at the University of Nebraska, Husker coach Tony Sharpe announced Tuesday.

As a prepster, Schnoor was a shortstop in baseball, quaterback in football and a guard on the Minden High School basketball team.

"Chuck is considered to be one of the finest all around athletes to come out of that area in recent years," Sharpe said. "He will be a fine addition to our team and will certainly strengthen our infield corps."

HMO Fund Request Discreetly Reviewed

Star Stail Writer A feam of federal officials who visited Lincoln last weekend were apparently satisified with the technical aspects of a Health Maintenance Organization (HMO) grant request, according to Don Nielsen.

Nielsen is president of the Community Health Care Association (CHCA), a local consumer group which is requesting $125,000 in federal funds to assist in planning an HMO for Lincoln-Lancaster County.

An on-site investigation was conducted in Lincoln last weekend by representatives of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

HEW will have the final say in approving or rejecting the grant request.

Although HEW officials gave no indication as to which way they will go, they found that the application was in accordance with federal guidelines, Nielsen said.

They also said it appears that CHCA has "extremely high community support" for the HMO project, Nielsen said.

Supporters Of Power Plant Charge Facts Misrepresented

Grand Island (AP) - Officials backing a proposed joint venture to build a power plant serving Hastings and Grand Island lashed out Wednesday at a group trying to delay the project, saying the group is "grossly misrepresenting the facts. The "Citizens Rights Protection Committee," formed about two weeks ago, announced last week that it hopes to gather 5,000 signatures to put an ordinance on the November ballot opposing the building of the plant on a site near Doniphan.

The ordinance sought would enjoin the Grand Island city officials from participation in and construction of a coal-fired plant outside its jurisidicational area (the city limits). Howard Peterson, chairman of the Great Plains Power Agency, told a news conference Wednesday that the joint project is aimed at saving local electric users money.

Peterson countered "Citizens Rights" committee claims that the plant would strain local water reserves.

Peterson said the proposed 150-magawatt plant will require only three wells, while irrigators in the area are now using about 3,300 wells.

Compating charges that the plant would foul the air, Peterson said the new plant will also employ the most modern environmental controls available.

Peterson also emphasized that the bonded in debtedness to finance the $100 million plant's construction will not be paid for through local taxes, but through revenues generated by the plant itself.

Peterson said some Doniphan residents claim they won't receive any benefits from the plant, but added that, "Doniphan couldn't exist without Hastings and Grand Island."

Peterson said a majority of Doniphan's residents work in either Hastings or Grand Island.

Peterson and R. J. Olson, director of utilities in Grand Island, said any delay in the project will cause higher bond costs and loss of power revenues.

Members of the State Ambulance Advisory Board voted Wednesday to scrap plans to li-cense and certify Nebraska's estimated 8,000 ambulance workers, substititing a registration plan instead.

The board was established to implement Nebraska's 1975 law. At issue is the 81-hour medical training requirement opposed by the State Volunteer Fireman

Judge: Motion To Supress Needs Specifics

Nebraska City (UPI) -District Judge Raymond Case Tuesday ruled a motion to suppress, filed by the defense attorney in a murder case, is not specific enough and has given the defense until Thursday to file a new motion.

Thomas Cole, defended by John Horan, is charged with first degree murder and stabbing with intent to kill, wound or maim in connection with the March 31 death of Mrs. Robert Roettger and the stabbing of her daughter, Stephanie Ruse, 11.

Horan had asked the court not to use as evidence in the trial the objects taken from the Cole home and statements made by Cole on March 31.

Otoe County Atty. William F. Davis said Horan's motion failed to set forth the defendant's property rights or which of his constitutional rights were violated by the search of his

Consequently, Case granted Davis' request to have the motion specified and gave Horan

NEW YORK (AP) - The ured by the Dow entered one of the most prolonged flat periods Over the five months since moderate advance Wednesday as Jan. 31, the average has closed no lower than 954 and no higher than 1,011.

On Wednesday investors showed some early enthusiasm over the statement by Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve, to a congressional committee that he intended to stick with a moderate monetary policy.

Burns also said the evidence indicated that the economic recovery was maintaining its strength in spite of a recent lull.

But after a 5-point jump at the outset, the Dow settled back again, faced with more of the resistance that has blocked its path above 1,000 for months.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Taursday, July 1, 1976 "Do you have a favorite sign?" —
Stephanie Harrison, Redondo Beach,
Calif. Response: My "favorite" is subject to change. I have found that the best and the worst have their points, that it good and the negative exists in each of us. All of us have the potential to be best, worst, mediocre. I really do not have a favorite zodiacol sign, although some signs have played more important roles in my life than have others. than have others.

☆ ☆ ☆ ARIES (March 21-April 19): Change in employment situation indicated — you may be vacationing or returning. But, whatever, pace is different. What sufficed in recent past no longer rings bell. Know it and plan accordingly. You get support of co-workers.

of co-workers.

snoing behind your back.

CAMCER (June 21-July 22): Relative, starting new business venture, wants your shoulder to lean on. Okay, But refuse to be a human cryving towel. Don't invite "bsychic ventures." Refuse to give up something for nothing. Short trip is on agenda and constructive.

3.804 (Mills 22.80 22): "Cambridge of the constructive."

LEG (July 23-Aug. 27): Distribution improves and so does your financial status. Your prestige is on upsaling — you comend "top price." Evaluate possessions—count your change. You may be "called for accounting." Arits, Libra figure prominently.

prominently.

YIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. Z2): Lunar cycle coincides with new starts, creative endeavors, ability to get to heart of matters. Leb. Aquarius could be in picture. Se assertive without being arragant. Judgment and intuition tikely to be on target.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow through on hunch — engage in teaching activity. You learn by sharing knowledge. Older woman is a gehuine ally, whether or not you are aware of it. Accent octosed-door conference, hospital, group.

SCORPIO (Oct. 25 Nov. 21): Empahsis on fulfillment, romantic interlude, friends, hopes and wishes. Social activity increases. Questions are asked — and answered. Movement and travel are in picture. Tendency exists to scatter forces. Sense of humor is valuable asset.

SAGETTARRUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Civic resonsibilities surge to forefront. Past promises catch up — someone calls your hand. Key is to maintain principles. Those in authority will support you. There is room for you at more elevated position. Know if — be analytical and don't back down. You'll win!

down, You'll win!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study
Sagittarius message, Stick to Issues. Be frank. Truth will make you strong—atthough you may be skeptical. Aquarius and Leo could be very much in picture.
Long-range plans, publishing, Communications are featured.

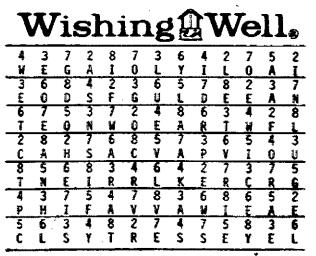

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb. 18): Involve-ment is leatured. Emotional responses are accented. Family reunion, home adjustment is highlighted. Diet. budget, recreation — these areas also command attention. Taurus, Libra figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go slow— study Libra message. Visit one contined to home, hospital. Don't feti all you know. Avoid seeing only inhough rose-colored glasses, Illusion is line, just so long as you don't delude yourself. Another Pisces could figure prominently.

Ego (July 23-Aug. 22): Distribution improves and so does your financial status. YOur prestige is on upswing — you command "fop price." Evaluate possessions — count your change. You may be "called for accounting." Aries, Libra figure prominently.

viRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lunar cycle coincides with new starts, creative endeavors, ability to get to heart of matters. Leo, Aquarius, could be in picture. Be assertive without being arrogant. Judgment and intuition likely

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Thursday, July 1, 1976

"Do you have a favorite sign?" — Stephanie Harrison, Redondo Beach, Calif. Response: My "favorite" is subject to change. I have found that the best and the worst have their points, that th good and the negative exists in each of us. All of us have the potential to be best, worst, mediocre. I really do not have a favorite zodiacal sign, although some signs have played more important roles in my life than have others.

* * *

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Change in employment situation indicated — you may be vacationing or returning. But whatever, pace is different. What sufficed in recent past no longer rings bell. Know it and plan accordingly. You get support of co-workers.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pleasure principle dominates. You speculate, "let go." Be ready for unusual relationship, love, creative endeavor. Obtain hint from Aries message. Take nothing for granted. Young person makes demands — but you will "win."

will "win."

CANCER (June 2), July 22): Relative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow through on hunch — engage in teaching activity. You learn by sharing knowledge. Older woman is a genuine ally, whether or not you are aware of it. Accent on closed-door conference, hospital, group. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Empahsis on fulfillment, romantic interlude, friends, hopes and wishes. Social activity increases. Questions are asked — and answered. Movement and travel are in picture. Tendency exists to scatter forces. Sense of humor is valuable asset. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Civic forces. Sense of humor is valuable asset. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Civic responsibilities surge to forefront. Past promises catch up — someone calls you hand. Key is to maintain principles. Those in authority will support you. There is room for you at more elevated position. Know it — be analytical and don't back down. You'll win!

down. You'll win!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study
Sagittarius message. Stick to issues. Be frank. Truth will make you strong – although you may be skeptical. Aquarius and Leo could be very much in picture.
Long-range plans, publishing, communications are featured.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Involve-ment is featured. Emotional responses are accented. Family reunion, home adjustment is highlighted. Diet, budget, recreation — these areas also command attention. Taurus, Libra figure prominently.

prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go slow — study Libra message. Visit one confined to home, hospital. Don't feli all you know.
Avoid seeing only through rose-colored glasses. Illusion is fine, just so long as you don't delude yourself. Another Pisces

IF JULY 1st 1s YOUR BRITHDAY you are independent, creative, temperamental, loyal, romantic and stubborn. Social lite "picks up" in August. Big change occurs in October. Leo, Aquarlus play important roles in your life. This is a year when you work out problems, get feet on ground, find where you stand and how to improve position.

OKAY, I'VE MADE UP MY MIND. PUT ME DOWN AS UNDECIDED."

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 2. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Capitol Museum Gets 1st Nod

Lt. Gov. Gerald T. Whelan and other artists and craftsmen. won preliminary approval Wednesday to use the Capitol building 5th floor to establish a museum and archives.

"We believe this could become a tremendous asset historically" as well as serving citizens' present interests, Whelan told the State Building Commission.

Members gave Whelan and his "Nebraska Capitol Archives Committee" permission to proceed with plans, pending fire safety approval. Whelan said he envisions dedication on May 1, 1977 — Statehood Day.

Whelan said his committee's purpose is to collect, preserve and display artifacts of Bertram G. Goodhue, the Capitol architect, and associated artists. He said the group seeks drawings, correspondence and materials of any kind pertaining to the Statehouse sculptor, muralists, wood and stone carvers, landscape architects

The committee will photograph or copy originals, or accept them as donations, and wishes to tape record or document any personal accounts or unknown facts about the Capitol.

There is so much we have yet to discover about the architects 'so Special Good Viewing and artists of the State Capitol -we want to preserve this vital information for generations to come," he said.

Peery's 2 Attorneys To Receive Payment

defended convicted murderer Wesley Peery will be paid $8,500 each plus expenses, Lancaster County District Judge Dale Fahrnbruch ordered

AND THE RESIDENCE OF THE CONTROL OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPER

Wednesday. Attorneys Stanley Cohen and Donald Hays asked last month to be reimbursed by the county for defending Peery, who was convicted April 30 of murdering coin dealer Marianne Mitzner. Last week a three-judge panel sentenced Peery to die in the electric chair. The state Supreme Court will review the sentence.

Fahrnbruch also said the lawyers should be paid $2,938.93 for expenses they incurred handling Peery's defense.

The bill includes court reporters' and secretarial fees, telephone bills, traveling and hotel expenses, laboratory fees and payment to several other was a $633 charge from the Institute of Forensic Sciences.

In June, 1975, Cohen and Hays were hired by relatives to replace Chief Public Defender T. Clement Gaughan, who was appointed by the court to represent Peery. Peery said he. couldn't affort to hire a lawyer.

However, last March, the attorneys asked the court to either appoint them or some other attorneys to defend Peery because they weren't being paid by the relatives. The court appointed Hays and Cohen to continue the defense, since the public defender's office said it would be hard-pressed to come into the case during the middle of the murder trial.

Since Hays and Cohen said they will appeal the guilty verdict, the attorneys probably will " incur more expenses in the case.

Cycle Training Stressed

A member of the Motorcycle Safety Foundation Wednesday brought Nebraska a fistful of ideas and programs to help with possible safety programs.

Adam G. Johnson, director of licensing and law enforcement for the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, Baltimore, Md., spoke

Wednesday. Johnson emphasized more stringent licensing programs accompanied by better education to prepare would-be cyclists. A series of licensing steps would prepare the average cyclist for the road, Johnson

Before receiving a license a rider would have to use a learners permit, take a knowledge test, get in-depth on and off-street tests and regular proficiency tests.

The tests are designed to alert neophyte riders to the dangers of motorcycling.

Roughly 35% of motorcycle accidents are single-vehicle accidents," he said.

He also noted that a large number of cyclists are involved in accidents within the first six months of cycle riding.

Johnson said his organization has taken a position of being in favor of laws requiring protec-! tive clothing including helmets. Johnson noted Nebraska's recent battle over helmet laws:, "It's an emotional issue that gets in the way of other safety factors," he said. He noted that Nebraska ranks in the lower half of the nation for fatalities — about 32nd.

He also noted the state ranks. 32nd in cycle registration.

won preliminary approval Wednesday to use the Capitol building 5th floor to establish a museum and archives.

"We believe this could become a tremendous asset historically" as well as serving citizens' present interests, Whelan told the State Building Commission.

Members gave Whelan and his "Nebraska Capitol Archives Committee" permission to proceed with plans, pending fire safety approval. Whelan said he envisions dedication on May 1, 1977 - Statehood Day.

Whelan said his committee's purpose is to collect, preserve and display artifacts of Bertram G. Goodhue, the Capitol architect, and associated artists. He said the group seeks drawings, correspondence and materials of any kind pertaining to the Statehouse sculptor, muralists, wood and stone carvers, landscape architects and other artists and craftsmen. The committee will photograph or copy originals, or accept them as donations, and wishes to tape record or document any personal accounts or unknown facts about the Capitol.

'There is so much we have yet to discover about the architects and artists of the State Capitol we want to preserve this vital information for generations to come." he said.

In other business, the com-

Peery's 2 Attorneys To Receive Payment

defended convicted murderer Wesley Peery will be paid $8,500 each plus expenses, Lancaster County District Judge Dale ordered Fahrnbruch

Wednesday. Attorneys Stanley Cohen and Donald Hays asked last month to be reimbursed by the county for defending Peery, who was convicted April 30 of murdering coin dealer Marianne Mitzner. Last week a three-judge panel sentenced Peery to die in the electric chair. The state Supreme Court will review the sentence

Fahrnbruch also said the lawyers should be paid $2,938.93 for expenses they incurred handling Peery's defense.

The bill includes court reporters' and secretarial fees, telephone bills, traveling and hotel expenses, laboratory fees and payment to several other

The two attorneys who people. One of the larger bills was a $633 charge from the Institute of Forensic Sciences.

In June, 1975, Cohen and Hays were hired by relatives to replace Chief Public Defender T. Clement Gaughan, who was appointed by the court to represent Peery. Peery said he couldn't affort to hire a lawyer.

However, last March, the attorneys asked the court to either appoint them or some other attorneys to defend Peery because they weren't being paid by the relatives. The court appointed Hays and Cohen to continue the defense, since the public defender's office said it would be hard-pressed to come into the case during the middle of the murder trial.

Since Hays and Cohen said they will appeal the guilty verdict, the attorneys probably will incur more expenses in the case.

Cycle Training Stressed

A member of the Motorcycle Safety Foundation Wednesday brought Nebraska a fistful of ideas and programs to help with possible safety programs.

Adam G. Johnson, director of licensing and law enforcement for the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, Baltimore, Md., spoke Wednesday. Johnson emphasized more stringent licensing programs accompanied by better education to prepare would-be cyclists.

A series of licensing steps would prepare the average cyclist for the road, Johnson

Before receiving a license a rider would have to use a learners permit, take a knowledge test, get in-depth on and off-street tests and regular proficiency tests.

The tests are designed to alert neophyte riders to the dangers of motorcycling.

'Roughly 35% of motorcycle accidents are single-vehicle accidents," he said. He also noted that a large number of cyclists are involved in accidents within the first six months of cycle riding. Johnson said his organization has taken a position of being in favor of laws requiring protec-! tive clothing including helmets. Johnson noted Nebraska's recent battle over helmet laws:

"It's an emotional issue that gets in the way of other safety factors," he said. He noted that Nebraska ranks in the lower half of the nation for fatalities — about 32nd. He also noted the state ranks 32nd in cycle registration.
